TEMPERANCE SERMON. AY REY- DAVID MERRILL.

"If at ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then the ox shall be stoned,—but the owner shall be quit. But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in; but that he hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death." Exodus xxi, 28, 29.

This is a rule which God himself has established; and it applies directly to the object of this address. Is ardent spirit wont to produce misery, and wretchedness, and death? Has this been testified to those who deal in it, that is, makers and retailers? If these two things can be established, the inference is inevitable—they are responsible, on a principle perfectly intelligible—a principle recognized and proclaimed, and acted upon by God himself. It is possible some may be startled at this conclusion, and look around for some way to escape it. What! is a man responsible to God for the effects produced by all the spirit which he makes and sells? This is a most fearful responsibility. Indeed it is. But if these two things are true, every retailer and maker must bear it. And can either of these be disputed? Turn your attention to these two facis: 1st. Ardent spirit is wont to produce misery. 2J. Those who make or sell it are perfectly aware of its effects. I will not insult any man's understanding, by entering into a labored proof of either of these positions. Upon the first point, let me refresh your recollection, and bring vividly before you, the hopes which ardent spirit has blasted, and the tears which it has caused to flow. Most of us can remember many a shocking scene which spirit has produced. Let any one of us set down and count up the number of its victims, which we have known-and their character and their standing in society, and their prospects and their happy families, and what a change a few years' use of ardent spirit has caused, and what they and their families are now. What a catalogue of wretchedness might any one of us make out. Very few but could remember 20, 30, 50, or 100 families ruined in this way—some of them once our most intimate friends—and their story is soon

They were once promising-exciting high expectations, were high spirited, despised every thing mean, and had a special contempt for a drunkard: and had a prophet proclaimed that they themselves should be all that they despised, they would have repelled it as a thing impossible. "Is thy servant a dog," as said Hazael, "that he should do this thing?"

But they could drink occasionally, just for a spree, for the sake of company. In this way the taste was acquired, and habits of dissipation formed. They became idle and of course uneasy. And they drank partly to gratify taste, and partly to quiet conscience. They saw that the tide was coming upon them, and, for a time, perhaps, made some earnest but irregular struggles against it. But it gained upon them. Every flow of the tide drove in some barrier-the resistance became weaker and weaker-by and by the struggle is ended, and they float with the current: and where are they? One has been found by the temperance reformation a mere wreck-in property, character, body and mind, a mere wreck, and, O, miracle, reclaimed. After years of dissipation, after causing unspeakable misery, he is saved yet so as by fire. Another is dead: his constied couse of dissipation. Another died in a fit-another was found by the roadside one cold morning a stiffened corpse. Another was thrown from his horse, and is a cripple C street, between 6th and 4 1-2 streets; regfor life, but still can contrive means to pay ular meeting, third Tuesday in every menth. a daily visit to the grocery. Another is a mere varabond, unprincipled and shameless -wandering from glocary to glocary-fit companion for the lowest company. Drin-king upon their bounty, yea, drinking their annual communication first Tuesday in Noleavings-the mere rinsings of the glassesa nuisance to society, and a curse to his kindred. Another is in the penitentiary, for December, a crime he committed in a drunken frolic. Go into the crowded court-house, and you may see another; his countenance haggard and ghastly, and his eye wildly rolling in despair. What has he done? One night after spending all his money for drink, and loitering about till all the shops were closed, he returned to his miserable habitation. He lar meeting, Friday. found a few coals on the hearth, and his wife and children sitting by them. He threw one child this way, and another that, regular night of meeting, Monday. for he was cold. His wife remonstrated, and withal told him that what little fire there was, was none of his providing. With many a horrid oath he declared that he would not be scolded after that sort. He would let her Wednesday. know who would govern, and by way of supporting his authority, beat her brains out with the last remaining stick of wood. He did not mean to kill her. Her dying struggles brought him to his senses, and he stood horror struck. He would give almost anything that the deed were not done. If that could restore her to life, he would be almost ready to give a pledge never to taste ardent spirit again. Now look at the wretchedness of his family. For years he has made very little provision for them: for they have lived as they could, half naked tober. and half starved, and not educated at allwith a most wretched example before their eyes. What encouragement had the wife or the children to attempt anything-to make any exertion. The children are abused and trampled on at home, and they grow up without self-respect with shame and without principle. Can any thing respectable be expected of them? And if they do rise, it must be through a world of difficulty.

No one can be healthy and happy without occonstion—some regular employment or profesand unsatisfactory one, and "killing time" the mose laborious of all work. Every one who prefers a cheefful and contented mind to the horrors of states, should employ his talents in some ro-
